The New S T A R.

Printed at HARTFORD, by APOLLOS KINSLEY.

TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 2, 1796.

THIS ſmall paper is printed for the purpoſe of making ezperiments with a model of a Printing-Preſs, on a new plan, lately invented by the Printer hereof. Though the preſs is by no means complicated, it puts the ink on the types, carries in the papers and prints two ſheets at a time, and will deliver them well printed at the rate of more than two thouſand ſheets in an hour, by the labour of one perſon only.

In a late paper it was ſtated, on good grounds, that the emigrations to Kentucky during laſt year, amoun - ed to not leſs than about forty thouſand people. If this navigation is laid open, the numbers will in- creaſe with rapidity.

As ſettlements increaſe on the weſtern waters, the Crecks and other Indian tribes, who have done ſo much miſchief on the ſouth weſtern frontiers, will be gradually ſurrounded and ſhut up, as in a bag ; and in a few years will become as inſignificant as the 6 Nations.

FEDERAL LEGISLATURE.

House of Representatives.

January 25.

SEVERAL petitions presented and disposed of.

A report was made by the committee on the Federal City, which recommends two resolutions in substance as follows:

Resolved, That the President of the United States be authorized to borrow such sums as, in his judgment he shall see proper, not exceeding in the whole 500,000 dollars, nor more than 200,000 dollars in one year, to complete the public buildings in the city of Washington. The loan to be secured on the public property of said city: the rate of interest to be by him agreed, and the term of payment, which is not however to be before the year 1800. The United States to guarantee the loan, should the property of the city prove inadequate, and that they engage to make good any eventual deficiency.

Resolved, That it shall be the duty of the commissioners appointed under the act establishing the temporary and permanent seat of government to render every six months to the Secretary of the Treasury an account of the monies expended, of the progress made and of the funds remaining in their hands, and an account of their administration—all to be laid before Congress.
